

History

Stretching from City Hall to the Philadelphia Museum of Art, Philadelphia's grand, tree-lined Benjamin Franklin Parkway is flanked by some of the city's most acclaimed institutions. Visitors to the Parkway Museums District™ will discover a cultural mecca with world-class museums and educational institutions, the magnificent Swann Memorial Fountain, Cathedral Basilica of Saints Peter and Paul on Logan Square and the world famous "Rocky" steps. The Parkway also gives off an international flavor by being lined with flags of countries from around the world.

The Benjamin Franklin Parkway represents one of the earliest examples of urban renewal in the United States. The grand boulevard was constructed to ease heavy industrial congestion, connect Center City to Fairmount Park and restore Philadelphia's natural and artistic beauty.

Beginning in 1892, City Council received the first proposal and petition to develop the Fairmount Parkway, passed a bill to begin plans for building it, adopted a plan developed by Horace Trumbauer, Clarence Zantinger and Paul P. Cret and finally in 1917, ten years after groundbreaking, adopted French urban planner Jacques Gréber's design to emulate the Champs-Élysées in Paris. In 1937, the name of the Fairmount Parkway was officially changed to honor the city's most celebrated citizen, Benjamin Franklin.

Public Art

The Parkway Museums District™ is home to over 30 works of public art, featuring masterpieces by three generations of Calder's, including the Swann Memorial Fountain, William Penn on top of City Hall and the Shakespeare Memorial, as well as Auguste Rodin's Thinker, Robert Indiana's iconic LOVE, Emmanuel Frémiet's Joan of Arc, and Mark di Suvero's Iroquois. Discover Philadelphia's public art on an interactive map at the Fairmount Park Art Association's website, www.fpa.org.
